Exporting 101-
Respond to Inquiries

How to Respond to Sales Inquiries

Sales inquiries from potential customers in foreign countries can be quite different than what companies are accustomed to receiving from domestic sources.

Responding to a reputable sales inquiry requires careful consideration of many elements, including pricing, export regulations, and payment terms.

This guide provides an overview of:
- Reviewing inquiries
- Determining how to respond
- Developing pricing and quotations

Review the Inquiry

When an inquiry from a foreign company is received, reviewing it for the following information can help a company make an informed decision about how to respond.

Pricing and Quotations

Pricing Strategy

There are several approaches to pricing products/services in foreign markets. Your company may choose to maintain a set profit margin globally or use a different price for domestic and international buyers. A pricing strategy will depend on demand and competition in the foreign market. Refer to the resources mentioned in Fast Facts: Selecting an International Market for assistance in researching international markets. Note that it is illegal to sell a product at a lower price abroad than domestically (this is called “dumping”).

Export Costs

While there are several methods for calculating a product or service's final price, the following costs should be considered in export pricing:

- Advertising and marketing in the new market
- Post-sale service warranty costs
- Packaging and shipping costs to the final destination
- Duties, tariffs, and taxes
- Labeling and translated instructions required under regulations
- Export documentation
- Insurance, finance, and banking charges
- Employee training

For more information, see this guide from the Australian Trade Commission. Remember that these costs will vary based on the agreed upon payment terms. See Fast Facts: Payment Terms for more information.

Currency Fluctuations

To avoid the risk of foreign exchange fluctuations, a U.S. exporter may prefer to quote prices and require payment in U.S. Dollars, thus placing the burden of exchanging currencies and associated risks on the buyer. If the buyer asks to make payment in a foreign currency, the exporter should consult an international banker before negotiating the sales contract.

Response Checklist

- A basic introduction about your company, its products or services, and prices
- References or information that indicates your company will be a reliable supplier
- A request for credit references and names of other customers
- Your company's production policy, lead times, and any advance payment requirements
- Your company's policy on exports, such as abiding by all U.S. Export Administration Regulations
- An expiration date for the quote
- Simple yet specific language that avoids slang/acronyms
- Consistent conversions to the metric system, if necessary
- Delivery point, terms of sale, terms of payment, insurance, and shipping costs
- Total charges to be paid, quoted in U.S. Dollars or the local currency
- A proforma invoice is a common response to an inquiry. Visit Export.gov to learn more.
Virginia Economic Development Partnership - International Trade offers a number of export-related services to Virginia businesses, including trade missions and market research by our Global Network of in-country consultants. These services are available to all Virginia exporters.
